3. Work experience

Time: 2016 June – 2019 April
Employer: Pallas Athene Geopolitical Foundation
Position: Director
Job details: I was the director of Pallas Athene Innovation and Geopolitical Foundation, created by the Central Bank of Hungary. As part of this, I led the Foundation's work organization (including selection and management of a team of nearly 30 people), coordinating the Foundation's research, education and support activities in line with the Foundation's objectives and the Board's decisions. My task was also the creation of the yearly budget of the Foundation, which had a capital of 70 billion HUF (around 220 million EUR), as well as the budget discipline. Research tasks included the management of a research institute of 12 researchers, the definition of research directions, the regular publication of research materials, the coordination of major professional projects and the establishment of an international research network. Educational tasks included the coordination of the Foundation's two doctoral schools (together with the University of Pécs and the University of Corvinus), where more than 180 students completed their doctoral studies. In addition to this, I supported the Foundation's fame and reputation with my foreign policy expertise as well as with international conference attendance and publications.

Time: 2015 March – 2016 June

Position: Head of Institute, Pallas Athene Geopolitical Institute

Job details: Pallas Athéné Geopolitical Foundation was created in 2014 by the Central Bank of Hungary, with a main objective of encouraging the creation of geopolitical knowledge, which helped promoting the economic development in Hungary and in the Central-Eastern European region. The main goal of the geopolitical Research Institute was to become one of the most influential geopolitical think tanks in the region. The Institute started with ten young researchers who were covering different regions. Researchers mainly supported the work of the PAGEO Foundation and the Central Bank of Hungary, while also working on their own geopolitical fields of research. I was leading and coordinating the work of the researchers and the analytical direction of the Institute, while focusing on my own research mainly on Russia and the post-soviet countries.
